Self Introduction

because

✓ My wife and our kids love and respect their parents”

1. What I learned from my parents and UBF elders

I took my kids hiking.

2. Things I learn from Bible

- Through the words of the Bible, I set my family motto to be, `Love God, and Love neighbor.` I taught my children to have these values based on the Bible.
- My wife and I read Proverbs with our children every week. We also have family worship service every week. Since my two sons are far away attending university, we have family worship service over phone.
- From a young age, both of my sons had 1:1 Bible study with me, and my daughters had 1:1 Bible study with their mother. From grade 10, I let them have 1:1 Bible study with shepherds and missionaries.

3. Things I have learned as a teacher

‘Love has to be freely given until children learn to understand, accept and express it.’

- All parents love their children. As a teacher, when I have conversations with parents, I see their deep love for their children. However, many children don't feel they are loved because it is not well expressed to them. Some of them even think they are ignored or they are isolated from their parents.

●A son of a rich family lives prideful and rude, and he thinks his father will solve all the consequences. On the other hand another rich son may be always humble and uses his money to help his friends.

●Some parents send their children to US or Canada for a short time to learn English, but their children fail University entrance exams. Some children who have poor family backgrounds, study on their own and enroll in high level universities. Having rich parents doesn't mean the children will excel in everything.

●A son whose parent is a teacher thinks his school life doesn't have much freedom. Some students say fathers understands them because fathers are teachers, and that is very helpful to his school life.

Teach by example/Do what you say/Practice what you preach

- When children are unhappy, they complain a lot because their parents aren't happy. It doesn't matter whether parents are rich or in good occupation. But children who believe their parents are happy, tend to be stable emotionally and positive in everything. They have good relationships with friends.
- Students that say their parents quarrel every day tend to be anxious and problematic.

- So I show my children that my wife and I have a good relationship with each other.

My life started with mother's word. I grew up with peoples' word and Bible's word.

- Children grow by receiving good words from parents. Good words make good life.
- ✓ According to my experience, saying the right words at the right time is more important than using logical and accurate words.
- ✓ Encouraging children to strive for their future potentials have been more effective than just pointing out problem.
- ✓ Because Koreans are foreigners and few in numbers in Japan, many people say Koreans are ignored and discriminated. I have been teaching my children that principal because we are few we can be more shining and valuable like diamond.

4. Things I have learned from parenting my children.

- When they are little, I used to spank them to discipline them at first. However, I found these three steps more effective:
 - 1. First, I show them my deep disappointment about their wrong doings and sin as soon as possible.
 - 2. Next, I express my deep love for them.
 - 3. Finally, it was very effective to write a letter or teach them while we were studying the Bible.
- When I bought toys and books for my children, I took them to the stores and let them search and choose by themselves; they loved it. In addition to that, they made good choices.
- To build a better relationship with children, I give both my sons a haircut once every month.
